

REACH IMPASSE IN DEBT TALK AT WHITE HOUSE

Hoover and Roosevelt Confer
On the Subject for Two Hours

STATEMENT IS BRIEF

Practically No Information
Given Out Following the Conference

By George R. Holmes
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—(INS)—An epochal conference between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt left the foreign debt issue today in exactly the same situation it was before they conferred—in the hands of a Congress hostile to every thought of cancellation or revision. Just what President Hoover proposed to the man who is to succeed him, or what Gov. Roosevelt suggested to Mr. Hoover, may never be known—there was no stenographer present at the meeting—but it was very apparent that Mr. Roosevelt committed himself and his party to nothing.

In fact, something of an impasse was reached. The brief statement issued at the White House after the conference said:

"The President and Gov. Roosevelt traversed at length the subjects mentioned in their telegraphic communication. It is felt that progress has been made. The President confers with the members of the Congress tomorrow, when the subject will be further pursued."

Probably no White House statement ever conveyed less information as to what actually took place during a two hour conference.

Gov. Roosevelt left the Red Room of the White House to continue his conferences today with Democratic leaders of Congress during the day. President Hoover also will confer with them, as well as with the Republicans.

While the White House conference was in progress, the Democratic leaders in Congress were having a meeting of their own. A dozen of them met with Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and decided against postponing the Dec. 15 payments due from European debtors, against cancellation in any form, and against re-creation of the war debt funding commission which Mr. Hoover has once before unsuccessfully proposed to Congress.

This Democratic sentiment was fully conveyed to Gov. Roosevelt during the evening, and it was emphasized in today's conference.

The net result is to leave President Hoover with the alternative of proposing, on his own, the re-creation of the war debt funding commission. It was noted that Gov. Roosevelt refrained from joining in any such recommendation.

Whether Mr. Roosevelt called attention to the fact the Democratic platform specifically states its opposition to cancellation of the debts is not known, but the assumption is that he did.

In any event, the Democratic die seems to be cast. It is against postponing the December payments, against remission of any part of the debts, and against reconsideration of the debt structures through the agency of a revised debt funding commission. There remains then, so far as the new administration is concerned, Gov. Roosevelt's campaign pledge that, if elected, he will endeavor to utilize the debts for the expansion of American foreign trade. How that is to be accomplished remains to be seen.

Meanwhile, the debts remain on the doorstep of the Hoover administration, which must find a way of telling Europe that the sentiment in Congress is overwhelmingly against revision, cancellation, or delay in payment.

DWARF IN UPPER BUCKS HOLDS UNIQUE RECORD

SPURNED CIRCUS OFFERS

The little village of Upper Black Eddy, according to Chester A. Melick, in a story published by the "Delaware Valley News," is proud of having as one of its respected citizens a genuine, guaranteed dwarf, who is one of the smallest adult persons, and probably the champion dwarf, living in the United States today. He is Levi T. Miller, 63 years old, with a total linear measurement of only four feet, two inches.

Many have been the enticing offers made to Mr. Miller to travel with the big circuses, but he has turned down all the circus managers in favor of the quiet life of a private citizen. Not even Tom Thumb, the famous dwarf, was successful in inducing Mr. Miller to join him in the show business.

Born at Upper Black Eddy on August 8, 1869, Mr. Miller is one of three sons of the late John and Ruth Fore Miller. His body and head are of normal size, his arms and legs making all the difference between him and other men, being the size of a small child's. His parents and one brother, deceased, were of normal stature, as is his one brother living.

Twenty-eight years of his early life were spent on the towpath following the occupation of a boatman on the abandoned Delaware Division Canal. Many a stubborn mule decided to move on when the little man clambered down from his coal barge on that famous inland waterway. He could swing the big rudder at the stern of the boat with as much ease as any of the six-footers. Tiring of the swish of the water, as it rushed past the canal boats, and the "hee-haw" of Maud as she yearned for the feed bag, Captain Miller started work in a bakery. Many were the persons that marveled at his strength to see him carry large sacks of flour that were much larger and heavier than he.

Later in life, Miller made his living with his legs in spite of his brevity. He built up a large newspaper route in his home town and vicinity. With advancing age, he found the work of

TEAGLE TAKES "TIME OUT" TO FIGHT THE DEPRESSION

Representative of Standard
Oil Says "We're Making
Progress"

HELPING TOWARD JOBS

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(INS)—"We're moving in the right direction; we're making progress."

Quietly Walter C. Teagle—"Teagle of Standard Oil"—said it today in an interview in his new offices in the Federal Reserve Bank building in the Wall street district. He wasn't talking about oil. He was talking about jobs—jobs for America's 10,000,000 unemployed.

For Teagle, the most powerful executive in the oil industry in the United States and perhaps the world, isn't working at his regular job of president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, a giant holding corporation with branches all over the globe.

He has taken "time out" to fight the depression—to get the unemployed back to work, part time at any rate. Not for himself, or for Standard Oil is he doing this—but for the good of the country.

"The oil business?" he repeated the question. "I don't know anything about it. I haven't been there in twelve weeks."

By "there" he meant his own offices in Standard Oil. He rolled down the top of his desk at Standard Oil on August 29. On that date he became head of the share-the-work movement which is captivating the imagination and enlisting the support of many industrial leaders. It's a great job, this new one which Teagle has tackled. And his absence from Standard Oil isn't helping that corporation, but when Teagle does anything he does it wholeheartedly, nothing else matters.

"The downward trend of unemployment has been halted," Teagle told International News Service. "The situation is better than it was in May and June. This is shown by the September figures."

Asked what, in his opinion, was the big economic problem before the country, he hesitantly replied: "Putting men back to work."

"Unemployment not only blocks the wheels of progress; it undermines the ground beneath them," Teagle declared. "It reduces purchasing power, the fuel which makes the business machine move. It engenders fear among those who operate this machine and diminishes their efficiency."

Teagle said a considerable part of the country's population "has gone on a budget dictated by fear of tomorrow." He pointed out that unemployment had claimed approximately one-quarter of the 48,000,000 gainfully employed at the peak of prosperity in 1929. He recognizes that relief agencies have accomplished great work in meeting the crisis, but says that what is needed is a "cure."

"The time has come for the whole nation to unite in a concerted attack upon enforced idleness," Teagle asserted. "The means are at hand. The share-the-work movement provides ways, adaptable to every business, of adding men and women to the payroll and avoiding lay-offs; it is gaining converts every day."

Teagle revealed that more than 5,000 organizations, mostly industrial plants, have adopted work sharing, but, all told, there are approximately 215,000 manufacturing plants in the United States. In other words, Teagle's big job of "beating the depression" is only started!

FIND GARAGE MAN DEAD WITH PISTOL CLUTCHED IN HAND

Coroner Believes It Was Case
of Suicide Over Financial Affairs

SOME THINK IT MURDER

Many Unpaid Bills Were Scattered Over Floor
of Room

Authorities of Bucks County and also State Police are endeavoring today to check up the whereabouts of the wife and relatives of Alvin Cliver, 52, proprietor of a service station at New Britain, two miles west of Doylestown. Cliver was found dead yesterday in his apartment above the garage. His hand clutched a pistol.

Cliver, who was said to have been a wealthy man in the Far West, settled in New Britain several years ago. Yesterday morning between 11 o'clock and noon, Mrs. Alexander Davis, the wife of the proprietor of a restaurant next door to Cliver's place, noticed some mail for Cliver and called to him that he had some letters. Failing to get an answer, Mrs. Davis got her husband to see if he could find him. He went upstairs and saw Cliver seated in a rocking chair, dead, with a pistol clutched in his hand.

Coroner John J. Sweeney, of Bucks County, was called in and viewed the body. The room was littered with unpaid bills and the coroner said that Cliver apparently had shot himself because of financial troubles.

Neighbors said that Cliver was married but that his wife had left him several months ago to obtain a divorce. Friends of Cliver also said that he had a sister living in Yardley, but that was all they knew about her.

In a strong box under Cliver's bed, a paper was found which read that he left all of his possessions to his mother, Mrs. Julia Cliver. She is reported to be an artist residing somewhere in Connecticut.

Murder was introduced as a theory into the investigation when Cliver's automobile was found in the garage adjoining his service station with a badly battered front. Police said that it looked as if it had run into a pole or some such obstruction. Authorities thought that Cliver might have been the victim of foul play, but Coroner Sweeney declared that it was an evident case of suicide.

The dead man was said to have owned considerable property in and about Doylestown. His body was removed to a funeral parlor and will remain there for several days until the relatives can be located.

TWO TONS OF COAL FOR NOTHING

(By "The Stroller")

A resident of New Buckley street is having a laugh these days at the expense of a certain coal dealer in this vicinity, but not in Bristol.

The New Buckley street resident, a few days ago was out in his yard painting some window sash. A coal truck stopped in front of his premises and the driver asked if so and so lived there and inquired as to the number of the house.

"I have two tons of coal here for you," said the coal man.

"Not for me," said the New Buckley street resident. "I didn't order any coal."

The driver insisted that the coal was for the individual in question and finally went to a nearby phone, calling up his employer.

"That is the name and that is the number, put the coal in," was the order.

So the coal was placed in the cellar.

A day or so later the coal man returned and with bags was ready to take back the coal.

"You will not," said the occupant of the premises.

Then an offer to settle for a reduced price per ton was made, but promptly refused.

And that is the way the matter now stands.

WE CAN GIVE THANKS

Tomorrow is the day set aside by executive proclamation, both national and state, for the rendering of thanks to Him from whom all things which mortals possess, come. The year has been one of great sorrow, worry and disappointment and perhaps will go down as such in the annals of not only the nation but the world, as well.

Its history has already been written upon the heart pages of man and woman, alike.

But! Although illness has ravished our bodies; death silenced the lips of loved ones; life savings disappeared over night and not only the growl of the wolf of hunger been heard, but his very breath been sensed;

We can give thanks. Thanks for the faith which permits us to carry on; confident that a brighter day will dawn.

Thanks for those leaders who are carrying aloft the torch of light and direction to lead the sorrowful and downcast into a new day.

Thanks for healthful and able bodies that are ready and willing to do the work of the world.

Thanks for the opportunity to do for others; to aid them in their distress, to clothe them, feed them and to give them drink.

Let them who have, even though it be but a little; share it with those who are in need, and then

JOYS OF LIVING

Who has not wished that he had lived in some remote and happy time? The magnificence of Rome, the glory of Greece, the golden chariots, the alabaster vases and the ivory chairs of Tutankhamen fascinate and enthrall. Looking about upon a sick and weary world, nerve-shattered and hungry, it is not difficult to imagine how pleasant life must have been in an easier, golden day.

Yet, if we had been living in the days of the pampered Pharaohs, the vast majority of us would have been digging the irrigation ditches, sweating over the great stones that went into the pyramids, or—if we had been particularly clever—perhaps hammering the gold that went into the ubiquitous statues of the king. The comforts of life were only at the top in 1500 B. C. and even the hope for improvement had not percolated to the bottom. There may be some consolation for the dissatisfied man of today in this thought—that his lot would have been infinitely worse 3,000 or more years ago.

It's easier to live today than ever before. Nearly all the woes from which the world suffers might have been prevented. But when an ancient civilization was overrun by a savage horde, or when plague or famine decimated the population of the fairest cities, the wisest of those peoples couldn't help themselves.

He who laughs first laughs most often.

If you pass the time, time will pass you.

Be happy today; it may be prohibited tomorrow.

Some men are so honest their arms never steal around a girl.

New Motor Law Effective In New Jersey, Jan. 1st

All commercial vehicles operating on the highways of New Jersey are required by a law effective January 1, 1933, to be equipped with devices, illuminated at night, showing the intention of the driver to stop or make right or left turns.

Edward B. Watson, manager of the Bucks County Division of Keystone Automobile Club, is advised by the club's legal department, that this act affects Pennsylvania commercial vehicles. "It includes," he said, "all commercial vehicles 'operated' in the State, with the exception of those specifically exempted by the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles. We are informed, however, that since the Legislature failed to provide for examination of vehicles to determine whether or not such signals were necessary, Commissioner Hoffman has ruled there will be no exemptions."

In answer to a communication from the club respecting the enforcement of the act, James J. Shanley, chief inspector, wrote:

"This department did not sponsor this legislation, but it is up to us to enforce it. I believe you will find that we will do this in a rational manner."

A fine not exceeding $50 is provided for violating the act, and no commercial vehicle will be permitted to register in New Jersey after January 1 unless it is equipped with the device. At present there are some fifteen devices which are approved by the State.

"While it is generally agreed," said Mr. Watson, "that signaling devices are necessary on huge trucks, it is regarded as unfair to apply the same rule to smaller vehicles, drivers of which can plainly indicate their intentions with the arm and hand signal. The next Legislature will be called upon to amend the act, but meanwhile it will be on the books for enforcement."

covering his large route too arduous, so he sold out his newspaper business a couple of years ago, since when his familiar figure has seldom been seen on the streets, most of his time being spent at home. He had never married, but makes his home with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Miller, Sr. Strange to say, until recent years, when age compelled him to live a less strenuous life, his favorite recreation was walking. He has proved that it isn't the quantity but the quality in legs that counts.

TOUGH ON THE CAT

BOSTON.—One of the strangest requests ever made to the Animal Rescue League was when a woman telephoned President Robert F. Sellar and asked for a "nice cat because I have a lot of fleas in my cellar." She explained that she would "put the cat in my cellar and all the fleas would gather on him and you could then take him back and delouse him."

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LXVIII.
THE long summer days dragged. Mr. Greely and his early-Victorian sister went for their annual fortnight at the vine covered cottage in Bolinas. The stylish Miss Yardley, her plain face flushed with excitement, left for Lake Louise with a girl friend and a wardrobe trunk full of carefully selected clothes. And when they were all back again, and even the office boy had had his two weeks, Daphne was still there.

"When are you going on your vacation, Miss Haines?" Daphne didn't know. She was waiting . . . for something . . . she wouldn't admit, even to herself, for what. "I'll go soon," she told them evasively. Every morning, in Mrs. Hinkley's back bedroom she watched her large gray eyes bright with hope.

"Maybe this will be the day . . . maybe he will come back today." Every night she covered her typewriter and cleared her desk, with a vague sense of disappointment. Another day gone . . . wasn't he ever coming?

He came one warm afternoon in August, when to one, not even Daphne was expecting him, and Mr. Greely was out.

"But I think Mr. Greely will be in later," Mrs. Hobbs, in her capacity of receptionist, volunteered. "If you'd care to go into his office and wait."

She was a little bowled over by this new Mr. Winters. This blond and strangely different Allan Winters, of whom all California Street was talking, this poised, nonchalantly at ease stranger who had replaced the awkward boy of two years ago, and the supposed fugitive from justice of eleven short months ago . . . this returned hero who was going to make that uppity McKevitt look sick.

"Thanks," he said, "I'll wait." And so it was that Allan Winters and Daphne Haines met once more in old Mr. McKevitt's dark-paneled office, with the bright hunting prints on the walls, and big, uncurtained windows looking out across the flat silver bay where the little ships, tinier than toys, rode silently in and out of the harbor.

Just making conversation . . . "Come into port" less than an hour ago. They held it as a quarantine for a century. Always fuss with the South American ships, you know. You can see the quarantine station pretty near, can't you?" They both looked steadily out to sea. Searching intently for Allan's ship, neatly tied at its accustomed pier. "We came in about over there . . . it was quite foggy this morning."

She followed his pointing finger, not seeing a thing. He chatted on, hardly conscious of what he was saying. He wondered now much she knew. He thought of that night last September when he wrote his heart out on a few sheets of white paper, and then impelled by some nameless, savage need, paced the waterfront, watching the shadowy hulking ships in the first gray light, not knowing, not caring who he had come . . . He thought again of his chance meeting with a seafaring friend . . . "Any chance for a landlubber to get on one of these boats?" . . . "Anywhere . . . do any thing." . . . "Sure, now—why not?"

He felt again that first sharp stab of realization when a few hours later he stood on the spray flecked bridge, and saw the pilot turning back to port, and he bound for South American ports, with his affairs, his future, his very reputation in the hands of an untrusty friend, and the girl he loved.

He looked down at her now, Daphne, with her cloudy black hair, her serious flower-like face, her wide dark eyes, flecked with arbutus as the waters in some deep, quiet pool in the woods are sometimes flecked with sun.

She knew he was looking at her. She struggled pitifully to retain her composure, to keep on staring blindly, unseeing out to sea.

But it wasn't any use. She turned her head, looked straight into his blue, asking eyes.

"I've been a fool . . . but I've been straight. . . Greely told you that."

She tried to answer, but she couldn't find the words. Instead she put out one shaking, thin little hand and plucked at his sleeve.

An absurd gesture . . . to see if he were real. . . (Please be real! Oh Allan, Allan, I just couldn't lose you all over again!)

He must have known then, Allan, who never before had quite dared to think that the girl of his dreams could care for him . . . He must have known, for he gathered her close, and she made no effort to get away. She clung to him with all her little strength, and waited for him to kiss her again, as he had that night . . . the night that he went away . . .

It was almost five when old Mr. Greely came back to the office. "Mr. Allan Winters is waiting. He's been waiting for hours," Mrs. Hobbs told him. She was rather concerned about him. A wonderful fellow, but that having to wait so long.

The old man did not seem surprised. "Get Miss Haines," he mumbled, leisurely looking over the late mail.

Miss Haines didn't answer her telephone in her office.

"Why I think—" Mrs. Hobbs was embarrassed. "I think she was working in your office . . . I forgot, and let Mr. Winters go in . . . Wasn't it all right to let him go in?"

him? He's waiting! the girl persisted. "I promised him—"

Old Mr. Greely chuckled. His old, wicked chuckle. "Never mind," he said, "he made for the door. 'I don't have to see him, I know what he wants.' . . . hum . . . hah! He's got it already!"

He was right. An almost deliciously happy Daphne had already given her word. They were married in September. Long before anyone had got used to the idea, and the bewildered but delighted Viola had finished what she considered an adequate trousseau.

It had to be soon, for Allan was going back to South America, and Daphne was going too. "Just light things," she told Viola airily. "You know—wide brims, and some ornate dresses. It's not there. Allan says we'll have some social life, foreign locations, and big coffee buyers, and ships' captains and things, but mostly we'll just be alone, or I'll be traveling around with him."

Her loss of climate and customs and distance were as vague as her conception of Allan's position, and his reasons for refusing the bright offers Greely, Sanderson and McMurtrie made him for continuing as the head of the bond business on California Street.

It was South America they were going to, she knew that much, and Allan loved it because he had made good there all alone when everything seemed against him. It was a good job, she supposed. Anything that had to do with ships, and plantations, and foreign buying sounded good, and the affairs that Mr. Greely was putting into his hands would make it better. But she would have sailed as cheerfully for Greenland, to live on blubber and fish. It didn't matter where she was going, since Allan was going, too.

"I don't believe you know yet what you're getting into," he teased her, as they watched the sun go down on the last day of their brief honeymoon in Mr. Greely's cottage at Bolinas.

"You mean I don't know what we're sailing into when we go out through the Golden Gate tomorrow?"

"Something like that. I don't think you even know your geography! It's just a beautiful Never-Never Land to you, full of orchids, and paroquets, and brown babies."

"And leave," she prompted, laying her smooth young cheek against his.

"And you don't mind going so far away—with an almost perfect stranger?"

"Not if you go, too . . . and you aren't a stranger, you're married, and besides you never were a stranger—not even that first day, that we came here together."

"You're taking an awful chance," he said, suddenly serious. "When I think of all the happiness, all the good things in life I want you to have, it—it scares me, Daphne. I love you so much—I want so much for you—"

"But I don't want anything but you, Allan. Just you. And if ever I lose you, I'll have the remembrance to keep me warm. Like an afterglow, you know—like the warmth the sun leaves deep in the earth here, after it's gone down. And that's all that matters. Anything else that happens is—just extra!"

And what can life do to a girl like that?

THE END.

PAY CULINARY TRIBUTE TO THANKSGIVING DAY

There is no greater Thanksgiving Day tribute than a delicious Roast Turkey Dinner with cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie.

This Thanksgiving can be an outstanding one for you and your family. Here is the meal that will make it outstanding—it is a Pilgrim Turkey Dinner adapted to the spirit of 1932.

Tomato or oyster cocktail, roast turkey with chestnut or sage stuffing, candied sweet potatoes or mashed white potatoes, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, broccoli, or spinach, cranberry sauce, celery, ripe olives, radishes, bread and butter, grapefruit salad with cheese wafers, pumpkin pie with quince jelly, coffee, nuts and mints.

Sage stuffing: $\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter or other fat, 1 cup chopped celery and leaves, 2 medium-sized onions, chopped, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup chopped parsley, 2 quarts soft stale bread crumbs, salt, pepper, 1 to 2 tablespoons powdered sage.

Melt the fat in a skillet, add the celery, onion, and parsley and simmer for a few minutes. Add the bread crumbs, season with salt, pepper, and sage, and stir until well mixed and hot.

Chestnut stuffing (for a ten-pound turkey): 2 pound chestnuts, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup turkey fat, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup butter, 2 cups chopped celery leaves and stalks, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped onion, few sprigs parsley, chopped, 6 cups bread crumbs, salt and pepper, savory seasoning.

Cook the chestnuts in boiling water for about 20 minutes. Remove the shells and brown skins while the nuts are still hot. Try out the turkey fat and add the butter. Cook the chopped celery and onion in this for a few minutes. Add the parsley and bread crumbs and season to taste with salt, pepper, and savory seasoning. Stir until the mixture is thoroughly hot. Wipe the turkey dry inside, sprinkle with salt, and fill with the hot stuffing.

Roast Turkey: Since the turkey, remove the pinfeathers, cleanse thoroughly, and wipe dry. Sprinkle the inside with salt, fill with hot stuffing, and sew up the opening. Fold the wings back on the neck, and tie the ends of the legs together under the tail. Rub the surface of the turkey with butter, sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour, and lay a piece of fat over the breast bone.

To roast a young turkey, put the bird on its back on a rack in an open roasting pan. Brown lightly in a hot oven (450° F.), then reduce the heat to moderate (350° F.) and continue to cook the turkey until it is tender. Baste occasionally with the drippings. Allow about 15 minutes to the pound for roasting.

For an older turkey, cover the roasting pan as soon as the bird has browned, and cook at a moderate temperature until tender. Allow about 20 minutes to the pound.

To Carve a Turkey: 1—Have a very sharp, long-bladed carving knife. 2—Place the turkey on its back with its neck at your left. Insert the carving fork at the point of the breast bone, the tines straddling the ridge, and hold the bird firmly. 3—Cut through the skin separating the leg from the body. Pull back the leg, disjoint and remove it. 4—Separate the drumstick from the thigh by cutting through at the joint. 5—Slice the meat from the leg into several portions. 6—Remove the wing by cutting down through the joint close to the body. 7—Carve the breast meat in thin slices.

LET US GIVE THANKS!

John Blake tried to smile. It was going to be pretty hard, he thought. Thanksgiving Day—that's a joke. As he passed a prettily decorated window a gay poster met his eyes. "What have we to be thankful for?" He read it and laughed. What had he to be thankful for? No job, his family living on the charity of relatives, a dingy shack, a promise of a position as a night watchman for nine dollars a week—should he be thankful for these?

The sound of a fire alarm aroused him from his dreaming. "Some poor person's house burning," he thought. This was a terrible world.

Just then Tommy his oldest son came running toward him. "Pop," he cried, "the house, it's burnin' 'n' mom 'n' the kids are in there." He paused to get a breath, then he continued, "I snuck out to play with the gang, after ma went to bed, so I guess they're still in there."

Without a word John ran down the street to the street of his home. As he was going he thought of Betsy his wife and their five children. If anything should happen to them what would he do?

As he came in sight of the house it seemed as if it had been transfigured into a great cloud of fire and smoke. His feet seemed to turn to lead as he watched it slowly engulf his small house. As he drew nearer, a strange sight met his eyes, for there out in the street, all huddled together and clad only in their sleeping garments, were Betsy and her brood. Tears blinded him. He rushed to them and held them in his arms. How safe he felt under the pressure of the fond caresses of Betsy and the children. How thankful he was! Here he was only a few minutes later, with less than ever, and how his heart overflowed with thanksgiving. Together the Blakes bowed their heads and murmured, "Let us give thanks."

(From Bristol High School Rambler)

Ralph: "May I have the last dance with you?"
Doris: "You've had it."

Connie (to bartender): "Ho! Ho! and a bottle of rum."
Rue (trying to be sophisticated): "Never mind the 'Ho! Ho!' for me."

PICKLED TOAD-STOOL BOUQUET BECOMING THE THING IN PARIS

By Alice Langelier (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—Pickled toad-stools lacquered and colored, make stunning little bouquets and nosegays for chic fall and winter costumes. Little bou-tonnieres made of the dried mushroom of the yellow variety eaten in France are lovely with the new browns and rust-reds and a rich plum shade goes with the new prune and wine tints.

An American girl, Marjorie Danton, of New York, is the bright one who has introduced this original trim to Paris. She is also showing great chandeliers made of the larger varieties of the fungus and even larger ones standing in pots to decorate the corners of her charming little dress-making salon just off the Champ Elysees.

Flowers are promised for the culture this season, and already a number of fashionable women have been wearing them in their hair for smart functions. A wreath of violets makes an admirable foil for autumn locks and a couple of camellias are never amiss tucked behind a pretty ear. One smart American woman puts a small group of white roses across the back of her head, which is a lovely fashion for the very young.

Wooden buttons are the edict of many French houses and one dress-maker is showing lovely hand-made ones with the wearer's monogram, pet animal or hobby hand-carved into them.

Clay, baked and tinted, also makes some original jewelry to wear with evening as well as sports frocks this season.

The odd bright-colored umbrella is now carried with the contrasting suit. The handle matches precisely the chosen color which may be brilliant green, magenta, dark violet, orange, etc.

CHAPTER ONE

A wet, winter dusk tangled itself among the oak woods west of Navestock town, making the blacks and greys of the landscape seem colder and more sad. The grinding of wheels and the "plud-pludding" of drenched horses drifted along the high road with the galloping of the wind. Old Tom Tyser, muffled up on the box of the "White Hart" coach, shook the rain from his hat-brim, and grumbled.

"Never knowned such weather! I've come home these seven days a'sittin' in a puddle."

Wet it was, and Navestock Valley might have been some primeval sea-bottom suddenly upheaved, still drenched and running with the backwash of the sea. The land lay sodden and tired; the trees shook the rain from their boughs with petulant imprecations. As for the grey coach-horses, their ears flopped dejectedly, and did not prick up at the sound of the postman's horn. Mr. Winkworth's red-wheeled coach laboured and squeaked, and strained. A decrepit veteran, it crawled daily between the railway at Warrington and Navestock town, its black panels needing paint, its musty interior smelling of stable dung and straw.

The passenger on the box beside old Tom Tyser saw Navestock town draw out of the dusk like a great rock in a grey sea. At first it was a mere black mass in the valley, but lights began to blink as the coach passed the lodge gates of "Pardons" and swung along beside the swollen river. Darkness blotted out the cloud scud above the swaying tops of the elms, and in Navestock lights blinked more and more, isolated yellow specks upon the outskirts, but clustered like star clusters towards the centre of the town. By old Josiah Crabbe's stone house, where the row of Lombardy poplars whistled with the wind, the cobbles of West Street clashed a welcome to the horses' hoofs. The sounds reverberated in the winding street, where empty footpaths gleamed wet in the light from cottage windows.

A church tower, more elm trees, and the black mouths of side streets and alleys drifted by before the coach crunched across the marketplace and drew up outside the White Hart Hotel. The darkness of a wet February evening hid the utter unimportance of this old-world event. The coach arrived, that was all. It carried just three passengers, and they abandoned it, and went their several ways. There was no stir of ostlers, no fluttering of curtains at the windows, no fat Mr. Winkworth standing under the "White Hart" portico. A single oil lamp flickered on its iron bracket over the hotel door. The pavement and square were crowded with nothing but puddles. All the upper windows in the big, white-fronted, square-built inn were black and lifeless patches. The bar and the billiard-room alone were steaming and huskily alive.

The tall man in the ulster had climbed down from the box-seat and deposited a shabby leather portmanteau under the portico of the "White Hart." He glanced about him, took off a rain-splashed top-hat, and smoothed the nap with the sleeve of his ulster. The light from the oil lamp dribbled down on him with a draughty waywardness. He was tall, with a gaunt breadth of shoulder that wedged out his ulster into sharp, square corners. The lamplight fell on his face, and ran off it like water off a crag, an ugly face with a big nose and a square chin. He was clean-shaven about a straight, terse mouth, and his eyes looked very steadily and very intently at life, as though determined to see nothing but the truth.

A boy came splashing through the puddles in the market-place, and stared doubtfully at the young man under the "White Hart" portico.

"Be you for Dr. Threadgold's, mister?"

He was a fat boy, with blown-out cheeks, a white muffer that bulged under his chin, and trousers that fitted very tightly over a certain portion of his figure. The man studied him with that indescribable gleam of the eyes that goes with a lively sense of humour.

"That's right—Mr. Pickwick. I've just come by the coach."

"I beg your pardon, I'm sure."

The boy eyed him suspiciously. "My name's Sam, Sam Perkins, and I carry out the bottles."

"That's something to begin with. Can you manage this bit of luggage?"

The boy heaved at the portmanteau, and found that it came up quite easily. The tall man's voice had had a peculiar effect upon him. It was a deep, yet quiet voice, a voice that suggested a reserve of

BRISTOL HIGH READY TO BATTLE MORRISVILLE

(By Osear Corn)

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock a big crowd is expected to witness the annual turkey day clash between Bristol High and Morrisville High.

Both schools have had fairly good seasons, and due to the ancient rivalry between them, the game will surely prove to be fast and hard-fought. Neither team has won all its games, but both have made some remarkable showings.

In black and white Morrisville's chance of winning is good; they have hit their stride in late season and have defeated some good opponents. Bristol is also determined to win this game and if the field is fast, and "Lady Luck" favors them; they might come through.

A big pre-game ticket sale is now going on at Mill street. If it is more convenient for you, buy from these ticket sellers.

Today the local high school squad will have a light signal drill to end up a year of practice.

Down the Bowling Alleys

The Odd Fellows won three points from the Cast-Offs in a league match last night on the Bristol alleys.

Yeagle of the Odd Fellows was high man with 599, while Sam Dixon was high for the Cast-Offs with 538.

CROYDON A. C. WILL PLAY BRISTOL ELEVEN

The annual gridiron tilt between Bristol A. A. and Croydon A. C. which is scheduled to take place tomorrow afternoon at Eddington field has turned into something more than tradition since the starting of negotiations between Croydon and St. Ann's of Bristol. The game now appears to be one for a title of championship of Lower Bucks County.

It all came about when it was whispered about that the victor of the Turkey Day tilt at Eddington would be the champ of this section. T. M. Juno, manager of the St. Ann's eleven stepped into the picture and said: "You can't settle the championship business without considering our team."

As a result a natural play-off has come about. Croydon will meet the Bristol A. A. in the first tilt of the series tomorrow. Then St. Ann's is scheduled for a charity game with the A. A. at Sullivan's Field on Saturday afternoon. Croydon and St. Ann's will meet at a near future date. So, winner takes all, title and all that goes with it in the way of glory.

At least, when the end of the season arrives, gridiron fans of Lower Bucks County will know who stands ace-high in pliskin totting. If Croydon is victor tomorrow and St. Ann's wins on Saturday, Bristol A. A. will be definitely out of the picture and the title will rest on a final fray. If, however, Bristol A. A. should take the honors tomorrow they will have to work hard to beat St. Ann's on Saturday. Should this be the result a game between Croydon and St. Ann's would be unnecessary as far as championship titles go.

The game at Eddington field tomorrow, which is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock will no doubt be a close match. Both lines claim a like weight and both teams pack a wallop backfield. It has been whispered about that Croydon is being honored with the long odds though all fans agree that a tough session of football will take place.

Since the game last Sunday when Croydon held the strong Rising Sun Bulldogs to a scoreless tie—the same team having beat St. Ann's 12 to 0 in the earlier part of the season—many fans have gone strong in their opinions as to the result of the fray. In Bristol, however, the home town rooters are backing their team strong and claim that it will be a walk-away in their favor. So there y'are. Take your choice.

Officials have prepared the Eddington field for a record crowd. The field has been newly-lined and new sideline ropes and posts have been erected in expectation. Parking spaces on the grounds have been marked out since orders came from the State to keep parked autos off the highways. Everything is in readiness and even old Jup Plinius will have a hard time holding down the enthusiasm which this game has engendered.

SHAMROCKS TRIUMPH OVER GAELS, 48 TO 36

The Shamrocks took undisputed possession of first place in the A. O. H. Basketball League last night by defeating the Gaels, 48-36, while the Columbians were handing the Celtics a 36-30 reverse. The games were played on the A. O. H. court.

It was the second consecutive victory for the "Shamies" who are the only undefeated team in the Hibernians' loop. It was the first defeat for the Gaels and the first victory of the league for the Columbians. The Celtics have been beaten twice.

It was really Eddie Roe who tossed the Shamrocks to victory. He hit the cords for seven field goals and also scored seven times from the foul mark, making a total of 21 points. He also played a fine passing game to help his team-mates to roll the sphere into the net. "Tuddy" Gosline sunk in five shots to tally ten points.

Although they prove fine marksmen from the foul line, the Celtics could not overcome an early Columbian lead and bowed to "Vic" Potts' team. Fourteen of the losers' points were scored from the gift mark and kept the Celts in the game until the final whistle. "Chuckie" Connors was high scorer for the winners with ten points. The A. O. H. League games, scheduled for Friday night have been cancelled.

METHOD OF SUBMITTING CLAIMS CAUSES TROUBLE

Many Hunters Fail to Properly Comply With Postal Regulations

INFORMATION IS GIVEN

Game Warden Daniel Potter, Jr., today makes public the following article relative to submitting of bounty claims properly:

Hunters submitting claims for bounty are causing the Game Commission and themselves considerable trouble by failing to properly comply with postal regulations.

In many cases claimants have been inserting their bounty affidavits in the same package with the skins they are probating, thereby making the package first-class mail instead of parcel post. As a result, these packages are opened by the Post Office authorities. The Game Commission is not compelled to accept parcels upon which postage is due; consequently they are asking that claimants insert the affidavit in a separate envelope having the necessary three cents postage to make the letter first-class, and then either fasten or paste same on the outside of the package. In this manner it can legally be mailed as parcel post.

Failure to comply with these regulations will result in the parcels being returned to the sender who will be obliged to pay the additional amount of postage due, and then remit to the Game Commission at Harrisburg, in accordance with postal regulations.

Pelts sent by parcel post must not be sealed or pasted in any way as this makes it possible to readily inspect the contents. This method of preparing packages for mailing also changes the classification from parcel post to first-class mail. Persons sending in bounty claims should not hesitate to consult their local post office authorities for information on latest regulations.

Miss Tyke asked the association to donate something toward costuming the children for the Christmas play, given in King Hall the afternoon before the Christmas vacation. The meeting moved to donate five dollars for this purpose. It was decided not to have any business meeting in December. Parents and friends of the children are invited to attend.

A plan to have a card party was discussed. Date will be announced later. Edward G. Katzmar, Mr. Wenner and Mr. Curtis were appointed on the committee.

Messrs. Swan and Katzmar are on the membership committee and reported that they are doing their best to secure members. It was suggested that each member of the meeting bring a friend in January to increase the attendance.

Miss Dorothy Wenner and Miss Ethel Hartman favored with a piano duet. Raymond Hill and Lewis Hartman gave a drum duet with Miss Hartman and Miss Wenner accompanying them on the piano. Mr. Peters' class presented the rest of the program:

Recitation, Miss Peggy Skeen, "Good Thanksgiving"; Miss Jane Pedrick, recitation, "Thanksgiving"; "The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England," Miss Mildred Lange; original recitation by Marion Kirk; original fable, "Wise Turkey," Raymond Hill; original poem, "Thanksgiving," Miss Jane Pedrick; "Thanksgiving Day," Miss Margaret Lonnegan; original poem on "Thanksgiving Day," Margaret Pickersgill; original story by Manning Laster, "Ready George"; original poem, Leroy Swan, "The First Thanksgiving Day"; original Hallows' story, Jack Scarber.

Feature of Scouts' Trip Is Passing of Tests

The members of Bristol Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, spent the week-end at Camp Buccoo, Flemington, N. J., and returned to Bristol Sunday afternoon reporting a successful trip. The scouts were under the leadership of Scoutmaster P. W. Grunert and two members of the troop committee, H. A. Pettit and R. S. Beswick.

The feature event of the trip was the practical demonstration of tracking and signaling, and first-aid. Two of the boys, H. Pettit, Jr., and Gene Nichols, laid out a trail three miles in length and from the end of the trail established communication with the camp by wig-wag messages from Gene Nichols to C. Nichols and back. Two other boys, Scheffey and Beswick, then followed the trail to pass their test in tracking, and accompanied by L. Herman, arrived at the end of the trail.

At the end of the trail Scheffey pretended he had a broken leg. Messages were sent to the camp to have the camp made ready, emergency first-aid was given, and Scheffey was carried to camp on a stretcher made with saplings and Scout coats.

Tests passed over the week-end: R. Scheffey, tracking and cooking; J. Beswick, tracking, W. Herman, knife and hatchet.

LIGHT BACK-FIELD MEN LIKE ALBIE BOOTH AND ORVILLE MOHLER VERY OFTEN PROVE TOO FRAIL TO STAND THE GAFF, AND IMPAIRED HEALTH PREVENTS THEM FROM FINISHING THEIR GRID CAREERS AT COLLEGE.

WHAT price size on the gridiron? It would certainly seem that little men have to face a tremendous handicap on the football field, and of course it is true that very few undersized players have made good in a big way on the gridiron.

As a matter of fact, two recent grid stars like Albie Booth and Orville Mohler, both of whom were very light as football players go, seem to prove that the smaller, lighter men are usually unable to stand the grueling pace of topnotch gridiron play.

Booth and Mohler were both football geniuses. They were endowed with more natural talent than almost any other football stars of recent times. Little Albie was absolutely, uncannily in his ability to pick holes in the opposing line through which to make long runs. He was truly wraith-like in his broken field running, and his magnetic personality was the driving force of the Yale eleven.

Mohler was tabbed as a gridiron genius even in his high school days. He was known as a ball-carrier who could "use a blade of grass for interference"—a marvelous quarterback and a great field general.

Yet both Booth and Mohler with all their elusiveness and football genius, were constantly being injured, and both were unable to finish their college football careers, sullying directly from gridiron injury. They were too light to stand the terrific buffeting to which all football players are subjected.

On the other hand, there is Tony Siano, former Fordham center and sometime All-American, who was subjected to all the terrific pounding which is entailed in playing the center position, and although he was merely a midget in comparison with the average line men, he was a giant in football ability—and he stood the gaff. Not only did he emerge with flying colors and apparently unimpaired physique after several years of college play, but now he is actually making good as a professional football player!

As you probably know, the professionals are usually much huskier than the average college gridmen, so you can imagine what little Tony is up against in the "pro" ranks!

COACH CO. WANTS TO RUN ITS BUSES
INTO FRANKFORD

Hearing On Application Held In Phila. Before Commission Today

WITNESSES FROM HERE

Opposed by P. R. R. and
P. R. T. in Its Request

(By Staff Correspondent)
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 23.—Hearing upon the application of the Delaware River Coach Company requesting permission to extend its route from Torresdale to the P. R. T. terminus, Bridge street, Frankford, was held before the Public Service Commission here today.

A large number of witnesses from Bristol and surrounding towns were present at the hearing and a number of them had given testimony up until the hour of adjournment which was 1 p. m.

The hearing will reconvene at two o'clock this afternoon.

The Delaware River Coach Company now operates a bus line from Trenton, New Jersey, to Torresdale, and in the present application is seeking to have its franchise extended so that its coaches will run direct to the Bridge street terminal.

The application is being fought by both the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company.

"I want to afford service more direct and through," said M. J. Hill, vice-president and general manager of the Coach Company. "There is a demand for continuous and through service," said Mr. Hill.

Mr. Hill was asked if the Trenton, Bristol and Philadelphia Street Railway Company, the parent organization of the Delaware River Coach Company, had not applied twice before for the same commission. Mr.
Hill said he only recalled one application, having been refused.

Clifford L. Anderson, Bristol burgess, said he believed "a more through service was in demand." Burgess Anderson supported the testimony given by Mr. Hill. He said he had received a number of complaints as to the inadequacy of the service given by the P. R. R. out of Bristol. Attorney Rose, for the P. R. R., wanted to have Mr.
Anderson's testimony stricken out of the record, basing his objections on the grounds that a witness could not testify as to what others told them.
The Commission ruled upon the objection sustaining the witness and in explanation said that reputable persons could give such testimony as it would save time and inconvenience in bringing a large group of witnesses to testify along the same lines. Burgess Anderson concluded his testimony by stating "It would materially improve the service to Bristol if the request of the petitioners is granted."

Richard W. French of the Superior Zinc Corporation told the Commission
he thought the request of the petitioner should be granted as the P. R.
R. station was located in an inconvenient place and difficult to reach.

Hugh B. Eastburn, real estate broker and secretary and treasurer of the Delaware River Coach Company, said: "The present service is adequate during the morning and afternoon when workmen are going to and returning from their places but it is not adequate during the day." Mr. East-burn stated he believed a lot of people would live in Bristol who now reside elsewhere if there was better transportation between Bristol and Philadelphia. He said a number of Bristol people now go to Burlington where they take a bus service into Philadelphia. "And a lot of renters have been lost to Bristol because of inadequate transportation."

Jacob C. Schmidt, florist and coun-cilmán, told the Commission of various

Chief William Sinsler and ten other firemen were lowered to safety with life belts today when they were trapped on the roof of the Old Third Armory here in south Philadelphia, which was swept by flames today. The men were removed from the roof only a few minutes before it collapsed.
Throughout the fire the firemen were handicapped in battling the flames by the intense cold and by almost continuous explosions of machine gun cartridges stored in the armory.

POISONED SOUP IS CHARGE

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 23.—Henry Fox, 35 year old waiter was held in $2500 bail today for the Grand Jury on a charge of assault with intent to kill by placing alleged poison in an elderly man's soup. Fox was arraigned before Magistrate Edw. Nappen upon the complaint of Mrs. Mary Pancuff, a cook. The alleged victim is Shalom Kartson, 72. Fox was employed in a restaurant operated by a son of the elder Kartson and he became enraged at the aged man because of his commands during his visits to the lunch room. Recently Mrs. Pancuff said Fox told her "I am going to fix that old man." Despite her protests, Fox placed a quantity of washing powder
in a bowl of soup he served Kartson.
When the aged man ate the soup he became violently ill.

DWARF IN UPPER BUCKS

SPURNED CIRCUS OFFERS

The little village of Upper Black Eddy, according to Chester A. Melick, in a story published by the "Delaware Valley News," is proud of having as one of its respected citizens a genuine, guaranteed dwarf, who is one of the smallest adult persons, and probably the champion dwarf, living in the United States today. He is Levi T.
Miller, 63 years old, with a total linear measurement of only four feet, two inches.

Many have been the enticing offers made to Mr. Miller to travel with the big circuses, but he has turned down all the circus managers in favor of the quiet life of a private citizen. Not even Tom Thumb, the famous dwarf, was successful in inducing Mr. Miller to join him in the show business.

Born at Upper Black Eddy on August 8, 1869, Mr. Miller is one of three sons of the late John and Ruth Fore Miller. His body and head are of normal size, his arms and legs making all the difference between him and other men, being the size of a small child's.
His parents and one brother, deceased, were of normal stature, as is his one brother living.

Twenty-eight years of his early life were spent on the towpath following the occupation of a boatman on the abandoned Delaware Division Canal.
Many a stubborn mule decided to move on when the little man clambered down from his coal barge on that famous inland waterway. He could swing the big rudder at the stern of the boat with as much ease as any of the six-footers. Tiring of the swish of the water, as it rushed past the canal boats, and the "hee-haw" of Maud as she yearned for the feed bag, Captain Miller started work in a bakery. Many were the persons that marveled at his strength to see him carry large sacks of flour that were much larger and heavier than he.

Later in life, Miller made his living with his legs in spite of his brevity.
He built up a large newspaper route in his home town and vicinity. With advancing age, he found the work of

TEAGLE TAKES "TIME OUT" TO FIGHT THE DEPRESSION

Representative of Standard
Oil Says "We're Making
Progress"

HELPING TOWARD JOBS

By James L. Killgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)
NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—(INS)—
"We're moving in the right direction;
we're making progress."

Quietly Walter C. Teagle—"Teagle of Standard Oil"—said it today in an interview in his new offices in the Federal Reserve Bank building in the Wall street district. He wasn't talking about oil. He was talking about jobs—jobs for America's 10,000,000 unemployed.

For Teagle, the most powerful executive in the oil industry in the United States and perhaps the world, isn't working at his regular job of president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, a giant holding corporation with branches all over the globe.

He has taken "time out" to fight the depression—to get the unemployed back to work, part time at any rate.
Not for himself, or for Standard Oil is he doing this—but for the good of the country.

"The oil business," he repeated the question. "I don't know anything about it. I haven't been there in twelve weeks."

By "there" he meant his own offices in Standard Oil. He rolled down the top of his desk at Standard Oil on August 29. On that date he became head of the share-the-work movement which is captivating the imagination and enlisting the support of many industrial leaders. It's a great job, this new one which Teagle has tackled.
And his absence from Standard Oil isn't helping that corporation, but when Teagle does anything he does it wholeheartedly, nothing else matters.

"The downward trend of unemployment has been halted," Teagle told International News Service. "The situation is better than it was in May and June. This is shown by the September figures."

Asked what, in his opinion, was the big economic problem before the country, he unhesitatingly replied:
"Putting men back to work."

"Unemployment not only blocks the wheels of progress; it undermines the ground beneath them," Teagle declared.
"It reduces purchasing power, the fuel which makes the business machine move, it engenders fear among those who operate this machine and diminishes their efficiency."

Teagle said a considerable part of the country's population "has gone on a budget dictated by fear of tomorrow." He pointed out that unemployment had claimed approximately one-quarter of the 48,000,000 gainfully employed at the peak of prosperity in 1929. He recognizes that relief agencies have accomplished great work in meeting the crisis, but says that what is needed is a "cure."

"The time has come for the whole nation to unite in a concerted attack upon enforced idleness," Teagle asserted. "The means are at hand. The share-the-work movement provides ways, adaptable to every business, of adding men and women to the payroll and avoiding lay-offs; it is gaining converts every day."

Teagle revealed that more than 5-000 organizations, mostly industrial plants, have adopted work sharing, but, all told, there are approximately 215,000 manufacturing plants in the United States. In other words, Teagle's big job of "beating the depression" is only started!

Temperature Low Here
Today; Warmer Tonight

Increasing cloudiness and warmer and probable light rains in west and north portions tonight, is the weather man's predictions.

Thanksgiving Day there is likely to be occasional rain changing to snow flurries in the afternoon. Colder Thursday night in west and north portions.

Bristol residents made their way to work today as a stiff breeze blew in from the east causing the thermometer to drop to 25 degrees at seven o'clock this morning.

The prediction, however, is fair and warmer today.

Temperatures as low as 20 degrees above zero were reported from various sections. At Stroudsburg in the Pocono Mountain region temperatures of 10 degrees above and lower were reported.

FIND GARAGE MAN
DEAD WITH PISTOL
CLUTCHED IN HAND

Coroner Believes It Was Case
of Suicide Over Financial Affairs

SOME THINK IT MURDER

Many Unpaid Bills Were Scattered Over Floor
of Room

Authorities of Bucks County and also State Police are endeavoring today to check up the whereabouts of the wife and relatives of Alvin Cliver, 52, proprietor of a service station at New Britain, two miles west of Doylestown.
Cliver was found dead yesterday in his apartment above the garage. His hand clutched a pistol.

Cliver, who was said to have been a wealthy man in the Far West, settled in New Britain several years ago.
Yesterday morning between 11 o'clock and noon, Mrs. Alexander Davis, the wife of the proprietor of a restaurant next door to Cliver's place, noticed some mail for Cliver and called to him that he had some letters. Failing to get an answer, Mrs. Davis got her husband to see if he could find him.
He went upstairs and saw Cliver seated in a rocking chair, dead, with a pistol clutched in his hand.

Coroner John J. Sweeney, of Bucks County, was called in and viewed the body. The room was littered with unpaid bills and the coroner said that Cliver apparently had shot himself because of financial troubles.

Neighbors said that Cliver was married but that his wife had left him several months ago to obtain a divorce. Friends of Cliver also said that he had a sister living in Yardley, but that was all they knew about her.

In a strong box under Cliver's bed, a paper was found which read that he left all his possessions to his mother, Mrs. Julia Cliver. She is reported to be an artist residing somewhere in Connecticut.

Murder was introduced as a theory into the investigation when Cliver's automobile was found in the garage adjoining his service station with a badly battered front. Police said that it looked as if it had run into a pole or some such obstruction. Authorities thought that Cliver might have been the victim of foul play, but Coroner Sweeney declared that it was an evident case of suicide.

The dead man was said to have owned considerable property in and about Doylestown. His body was removed to a funeral parlor and will remain there for several days until the relatives can be located.

TWO TONS OF COAL
FOR NOTHING

(By "The Stroller")

A resident of New Buckley street is having a laugh these days at the expense of a certain coal dealer in this vicinity, but not in Bristol.

The New Buckley street resident, a few days ago was out in his yard painting some window sash. A coal truck stopped in front of his premises and the driver asked

WE CAN GIVE THANKS

Tomorrow is the day set aside by executive proclamation, both national and state, for the rendering of thanks to Him from whom all things which mortals possess, come.

The year has been one of great sorrow, worry and disappointment and perhaps will go down as such in the annals of not only the nation but the world, as well.

Its history has already been written upon the heart pages of man and woman, alike.

But! Although illness has ravished our bodies; death silenced the lips of loved ones; life savings disappeared over night and not only the growl of the wolf of hunger been heard, but his very breath been sensed; We can give thanks.

Thanks for the faith which permits us to carry on; confident that a brighter day will dawn.

Thanks for those leaders who are carrying aloft the torch of light and direction to lead the sorrowful and downcast into a new day.

Thanks for healthful and able bodies that are ready and willing to do the work of the world.

Thanks for the opportunity to do for others; to aid them in their distress, to clothe them, feed them and to give them drink.

Let them who have, even though it be but a little; share it with those who are in need, and then

We CAN give thanks.

JOYS OF LIVING

Who has not wished that he had lived in some remote and happy time? The magnificence of Rome, the glory of Greece, the golden chariots, the alabaster vases and the ivory chairs of Tutankhamen fascinate and enthral. Looking about upon a sick and weary world, nerve-shattered and hungry, it is not difficult to imagine how pleasant life must have been in an easier, golden day.

Yet, if we had been living in the days of the pampered Pharaohs, the vast majority of us would have been digging the irrigation ditches, sweating over the great stones that went into the pyramids, or—if we had been particularly clever—perhaps hammering the gold that went into the ubiquitous statues of the king. The comforts of life were only at the top in 1500 B. C. and even the hope for improvement had not percolated to the bottom. There may be some consolation for the dissatisfied man of today in this thought—that his lot would have been infinitely worse 3,000 or more years ago.

It's easier to live today than ever before. Nearly all the woes from which the world suffers might have been prevented. But when an ancient civilization was overrun by a savage horde, or when plague or famine decimated the population of the fairest cities, the wisest of those peoples couldn't help themselves.

He who laughs first laughs most often.

If you pass the time, time will pass you.

Be happy today; it may be prohibited tomorrow.

Some men are so honest their arms never steal around a girl.

complaints made to him as to the inadequacy of the Pennsylvania Railroad Service.

D. L. Landreth, of the Landreth Seed Company, was of the opinion that the service now given by the P. R. R. is inadequate.

George Taylor, Bath street, salesman, testified that he frequently went to Burlington and took a bus line into Philadelphia. He gave it as his opinion that many Bristol people would use the Delaware River Coach Company service if it ran direct to Bridge street.

Walter F. Leedom, director of the Farmers National Bank, said the present service is not convenient on the P. R. R., and that he drives to Frankford, parks his car at the P. R. T. ground and goes in on the elevated. He said the trolley tracks of the P. R. T. from Torresdale to Frankford are rough and much time is lost in changing.

Harry Lynn, stationary engineer employed at Lit Brothers, Philadelphia, says he loses much time in commuting from Bristol especially when he is on the afternoon or night shifts. If the Delaware River Coach Company buses ran direct to Frankford he would use them in preference to driving into Frankford.

Otto Grupp, Crofton real estate broker, told the Commission the P. R. R. service out of Crofton to Philadelphia is not adequate.

Harry Oliver, Bensalem Township constable testified as to the P. R. R. service and P. R. T. service not being adequate to the demand.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner, said the service was slow, inadequate and inconvenient. The physician testified he makes about four trips a week into Philadelphia parking his car at the P. R. T. grounds and using the elevated.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LXVIII.

THE long Summer days dragged. Mr. Greely and his early-Victorian sister went for their annual fortnight at the vine covered cottage in Bolinas. The stylish Miss Yardley, her plain face flushed with excitement, left for Lake Louise with a girl friend and a wardrobe trunk full of carefully selected clothes. And when they were all back again, and even the office boy had had his two weeks, Daphne was still there. "When are you going on your vacation, Miss Haines?" Daphne didn't know. She was waiting . . . for something. She wouldn't admit, even to herself, for what. "I'll go soon," she told them evasively. Every morning, in Mrs. Hinkle's back bedroom she awakened, her large gray eyes bright with hope. "Maybe this will be the day . . . maybe he will come back today." Every night she covered her face with a writer and cleared her desk, with a vague sense of disappointment. Another day gone . . . wasn't he ever coming?

He came one warm afternoon in August, when no one, not even Daphne was expecting him, and Mr. Greely was out. "But I think Mr. Greely will be in later," Mrs. Hobbs, in her capacity of receptionist, volunteered. "If you'd care to go into his office and wait—"

She was a little bowled over by this new Mr. Winters. This bronzed and strangely different Allan Winters, of whom all California Street was talking . . . this poised, nonchalant but at ease stranger who had replaced the awkward boy of two years ago, and the supposed fugitive from justice of eleven months ago . . . this returned hero who was going to make that uppity McKevitt look sick.

"Thanks," he said. "I'll wait." And so it was that Allan Winters and Daphne Haines met once more in old Mr. McKevitt's dark-paneled office, with the bright hunting prints on the walls, and big, uncurtained windows looking out across the flat silver bay where the little ships, tinier than toys, rode silently in and out of the harbor.

They stared at each other shyly. The long dreamed of moment had come, not at all as they had dreamed it . . . she, sorting papers at her desk, her nose probably shiny, and he expecting to find the office empty . . . not ready for her . . . yet . . .

"I'm so sorry Mr. Greely is out. He'll be awfully disappointed to think he wasn't here. I know he's been looking forward to how we've been terribly busy . . . we've been terribly busy . . . making up work day and night! Isn't it hot? Maybe if I open one of these windows . . . won't you have a chair?" she babbled crazily. All the blood in her body was pounding in her head. After the first startled stare she kept her eyes averted . . . she was afraid . . . afraid that she would see . . . on the Peru? he was saying. "An awful old tub. But a whole lot better than the one I went down on. I shipped on a freighter, you know. Signed on as supercargo." But Greely told you of course—

She shook her head. "No, he didn't." Oh, why didn't Mr. Greely come back? Why couldn't she stop this crazy shaking? You could see he didn't care a thing about her—talking about ships—

Just making conversation . . . "Come into port" less than an hour ago. They held up a quarantine for a century. Always fuss with the South American ships, you know. You can see the quarantine station pretty near, can't you?"

They both looked steadily out to sea. Searching intently for Allan's ship, neatly tied at its accustomed pier. "We came in about over there

PAY CULINARY TRIBUTE TO THANKSGIVING DAY

There is no greater Thanksgiving Day tribute than a delicious Roast Turkey Dinner with cranberry sauce, sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie.

This Thanksgiving can be an outstanding one for you and your family. Here is the meal that will make it outstanding—it is a Pilgrim Turkey Dinner adapted to the spirit of 1932.

Tomato or oyster cocktail, roast turkey with chestnut or sage stuffing, candied sweet potatoes or mashed white potatoes, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, broccoli, or spinach, cranberry sauce, celery, ripe olives, radishes, bread and butter, grapefruit salad with cheese waters, pumpkin pie with quince jelly, coffee, nuts and mints.

Sage stuffing: $\frac{3}{4}$ cup butter or other fat, 1 cup chopped celery and leaves, 2 medium-sized onions, chopped, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped parsley, 2 quarts soft stale bread crumbs, salt, pepper, 1 to 2 tablespoons powdered sage.

Melt the fat in a skillet, add the celery, onion, and parsley and simmer for a few minutes. Add the bread crumbs, season with salt, pepper, and sage, and stir until well mixed and hot.

Chestnut stuffing (for a ten-pound turkey): 1 pound chestnuts, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup turkey fat, $\frac{1}{4}$ cup butter, 2 cups chopped celery leaves and stalks, $\frac{1}{2}$ cup chopped onion, few sprigs parsley, chopped, 6 cups bread crumbs, salt and pepper, savory seasoning.

Cook the chestnuts in boiling water for about 20 minutes. Remove the shells and brown skins while the nuts are still hot. Try out the turkey fat and add the butter. Cook the chopped celery and onion in this for a few minutes. Add the parsley and bread crumbs and season to taste with salt, pepper, and savory seasoning. Stir until the mixture is thoroughly hot. Wipe the turkey dry inside, sprinkle with salt, and fill with the hot stuffing.

Roast Turkey: Since the turkey, remove the pinfeathers, cleanse thoroughly, and wipe dry. Sprinkle the inside with salt, fill with hot stuffing, and sew up the opening. Fold the wings back on the neck, and tie the ends of the legs together under the tail. Rub the surface of the turkey with butter, sprinkle with salt, pepper and flour, and lay a piece of fat over the breast bone.

To roast a young turkey, put the bird on its back on a rack in an open roasting pan. Brown lightly in a hot oven (450° F.), then reduce the heat to moderate (350° F.) and continue to cook the turkey until it is tender. Baste occasionally with the drippings. Allow about 15 minutes to the pound for roasting.

For an older turkey, cover the roasting pan as soon as the bird has browned, and cook at a moderate temperature until tender. Allow about 20 minutes to the pound.

To Carve a Turkey: 1—Hold a very sharp, long-bladed carving knife. 2—Place the turkey on its back with its neck at your left. Insert the carving fork at the point of the breast bone, the tines straddling the ridge, and hold the bird firmly. 3—Cut through the skin separating the leg from the body. Pull back the leg, disjoint and remove it. 4—Separate the drumstick from the thigh by cutting through at the joint. 5—Slice the meat from the leg into several portions. 6—Remove the wing by cutting down through the joint close to the body. 7—Carve the breast meat in thin slices.

LET US GIVE THANKS!

John Blake tried to smile. It was going to be pretty hard, he thought, Thanksgiving Day—that's a joke. As he passed a prettily decorated window a gay poster met his eyes. "What have we to be thankful for?" He read it and laughed. What had he to be thankful for? No job, his family living on the charity of relatives, a dingy shack, a promise of a position as a night watchman for nine dollars a week—should he be thankful for these?

The sound of a fire alarm aroused him from his dreaming. "Some poor person's house burning," he thought. This was a terrible world.

Just then Tommy his oldest son came running toward him. "Pop," he cried, "the house, it's burnin' 'n' mom 'n' the kids are in there." He paused to get a breath, then he continued, "I snuck out to play with the gang, after ma went to bed, so I guess they're still in there."

Without a word John ran down the street to the street of his home. As he was going he thought of Betsy his wife and their five children. If anything should happen to them what would he do?

As he came in sight of the house it seemed as if it had been transfixed into a great cloud of fire and smoke. His feet seemed to turn to lead as he watched it slowly engulf his small house. As he drew nearer, a strange sight met his eyes, for there out in the street, all huddled together and clad only in their sleeping garments, were Betsy and her brood. Tears blinded him. He rushed to them and held them in his arms. How safe he felt under the pressure of the fond caresses of Betsy and the children. How thankful he was! Here he was only a few minutes later, with less than ever, and how his heart overflowed with thanksgiving. Together the Blakes bowed their heads and murmured, "Let us give thanks."

—M. C.
(From Bristol High School Rambler)

Ralph: "May I have the last dance with you?"
Doris: "You've had it."

Connie (to bartender): "Ho! Ho! and a bottle of rum."
Rue (trying to be sophisticated): "Never mind the 'Ho! Ho!' for me."

FEWER SCHOOL DAYS LOST DUE TO COLDS

Remarkable Results of New Colds-Control Plan of Special Interest to Mothers and Teachers

Last winter, comparative tests of Vicks Plan for better Control-of-Colds were made among 862 children in nine schools. A group of 429 did not follow the Plan—and lost a total of 501 days on account of colds. The other group of 433 followed the Plan—and lost a total of only 173 days on account of colds. A saving of practically two-thirds in school time! Each Vicks package contains full details of this unique Vicks Colds-Control Plan.

To PREVENT many Colds

Vicks Nose & Throat Drops

...after exposure, at that first sniffle or any other signs of "catching cold." The number and spread of colds can be cut more than half.

To END a Cold Sooner

Vicks VapoRub

...at bedtime, for its famous double action and quicker relief. Vicks is the mothers standby for treating colds. And it's available now in a new Stainless form.

PICKLED TOAD-STOOL BOUQUET BECOMING THE THING IN PARIS

By Alice Langelier

(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—Pickled toad-stools lacquered and colored, make stunning little bouquets and nosegays for chic fall and winter costumes. Little boutonnières made of the dried mushroom of the yellow variety eaten in France are lovely with the new browns and rust-reds and a rich plum shade goes with the new prune and wine tints.

An American girl, Marjorie Dunton, of New York, is the bright one who has introduced this original trim to Paris. She is also showing great chandeliers-cups made of the larger varieties of the fungus and even larger ones standing in pots to decorate the corners of her charming little dress-making salon just off the Champs Elysees.

Flowers are promised for the coiffure this season, and already a number of fashionable women have been wearing them in their hair for smart functions. A wreath of violets makes an admirable foil for autumn locks and a couple of camellias are never amiss tucked behind a pretty ear. One smart American woman puts a small group of white roses across the back of her head, which is a lovely fashion for the very young.

Wooden buttons are the edict of many French houses and one dress-maker is showing lovely hand-made ones with the wearer's monogram, pet animal or hobby hand-carved into them.

Clay, baked and tinted, also makes some original jewelry to wear with evening as well as sports frocks this season.

The odd bright-colored umbrella is now carried with the contrasting suit. The handle matches precisely the chosen color which may be brilliant green, magenta, dark violet, orange, etc.

CHAPTER ONE

A wet, winter dusk tangled itself among the oak woods west of Naves-tock town, making the blacks and greys of the landscape seem colder and more sad. The grinding of wheels and the "plud-pludding" of drenched horses drifted along the high road with the galloping of the wind. Old Tom Tyser, muffled up on the box of the "White Hart" coach, shook the rain from his hat-brim, and grumbled.

"Never known such weather! I've come home these seven days a'sittin' in a puddle."

Wet it was, and Navesstock Valley might have been some primeval sea-bottom suddenly upheaved, still drenched and running with the backwash of the sea. The land lay sodden and tired; the trees shook the rain from their boughs with petulant imprecations. As for the grey coach-horses, their ears flopped dejectedly, and did not pick up at the sound of the postman's horn. Mr. Winkworth's red-wheeled coach laboured and squeaked, and strained. A decrepit veteran, it crawled daily between the railway at Wannington and Navesstock town, its black panels needing paint, its musty interior smelling of stable dung and straw.

The passenger on the box beside old Tom Tyser saw Navesstock town draw out of the dusk like a great rock in a grey sea. At first it was a mere black mass in the valley, but lights began to blink as the coach passed the lodge gates of "Pardons" and swung along beside the swollen river. Darkness blotted out the cloud scud above the swaying tops of the elms, and in Navesstock lights blinked more and more, isolated yellow specks upon the outskirts, but clustered like star clusters towards the centre of the town. By old Josiah Crabbe's stone house, where the row of Lombardy poplars whistled with the wind, the cobbles of West Street clashed a welcome to the horses' hoofs. The sounds reverberated in the winding street, where empty footpaths gleamed wet in the light from cottage windows.

A church tower, more elm trees, and the black mouths of side streets and alleys drifted by before the coach crunched across the market-place and drew up outside the White Hart Hotel. The darkness of a wet February evening hid the utter unimportance of this old-world event. The coach arrived, that was all. It carried just three passengers, and they abandoned it, and went their several ways. There was no stir of ostlers, no fluttering of curtains at the windows, no fat Mr. Winkworth standing under the "White Hart" portico. A single oil lamp flickered on its iron bracket over the hotel door. The pavement and square were crowded with nothing but puddles. All the upper windows in the big, white-fronted, square-built inn were black and lifeless patches. The bar and the billiard-room alone were steamily and huskily alive.

The tall man in the ulster had climbed down from the box-seat and deposited a shabby leather portmanteau under the portico of the "White Hart." He glanced about him, took off a rain-splashed top-hat, and smoothed the nap with the sleeve of his ulster. The light from the oil lamp dribbled down on him with a draughty waywardness. He was tall, with a gaunt breadth of shoulder that wedged out his ulster into sharp, square corners. The lamplight fell on his face and ran off it like water off a crag, an ugly face with a big nose and a square chin. He was clean-shaven about a straight, terse mouth, and his eyes looked very steadily and very intently at life, as though determined to see nothing but the truth.

A fat boy came splashing through the puddles and asked the tall, young physician: "Be you for Dr. Threadgold's?"

A boy came splashing through the puddles in the market-place, and stared doubtfully at the young man under the "White Hart" portico.

"Be you for Dr. Threadgold's, mister?"

He was a fat boy, with blown-out cheeks, a white muffer that bulged under his chin, and trousers that fitted very tightly over a certain portion of his figure. The man studied him with that indescribable gleam of the eyes that goes with a lively sense of humour.

"That's right—Mr. Pickwick, I've just come by the coach."

"My name's not Pickwick."

"I beg your pardon, I'm sure."

The boy eyed him suspiciously. "My name's Sam, Sam Perkins, and I carry out the bottles."

"That's something to begin with. Can you manage this bit of luggage?"

The boy heaved at the portmanteau, and found that it came up quite easily. The tall man's voice had had a peculiar effect upon him. It was a deep, yet quiet voice, a voice that suggested a reserve of breath stored away in a capacious chest, a voice that would grow quieter and quieter under stress, like the smile of a man who is doggedly good-tempered and knows how to use his fists.

"Anything else, sir?"

"The 'sir' was a distinct uplift."

"No; that's the lot."

The portmanteau was exceedingly light, and its lightness filled the fat boy with speculative surprise. He remembered that when young Surgeon Stott came as assistant to Dr. Threadgold at Navesstock, that gentleman's luggage had filled the "White Hart" hand-cart, and that Fyson, the coachman, had broken his braces in getting it upstairs. Sam balanced the portmanteau on his shoulder, and made an imaginary inventory of its contents. He allowed the big man one night-shirt, a razor and washing bag, a pair of slippers, two shirts, a pot of jam, and a second-best pair of trousers. Nor were Sam's calculations far from the actual facts. Dr. John Wolfe had all his worldly possessions in that leather portmanteau.

Dr. Montague Threadgold's house stood on the north side of Mulberry Green, the long windows in its flat red front overlooking the old mulberry trees, and the white posts and chains that bounded the stretch of grass. A solid and portly house, it had for its neighbours a dozen other solid and portly houses, all built of red brick with white stone cornices and ashlar work at the angles, all with massive front doors and lion-headed brass knockers, and door-steps white as newly starched aprons.

BRISTOL HIGH READY TO BATTLE MORRISVILLE

(By Oscar Corn)

Tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock a big crowd is expected to witness the annual turkey day clash between Bristol High and Morrisville High.

Both schools have had fairly good seasons, and due to the ancient rivalry between them, the game will surely prove to be fast and hard-fought. Neither team has won all its games, but both have made some remarkable showings.

In black and white Morrisville's chance of winning is good; they have hit their stride in late season and have defeated some good opponents. Bristol is also determined to win this game and if the field is fast, and "Lady Luck" favors them; they might come through.

A big pre-game ticket sale is now going on at Mill street. If it is more convenient for you, buy from these ticket sellers.

Today the local high school squad will have a light signal drill to end up a year of practice.

The Odd Fellows won three points from the Cast-Offs in a league match last night on the Bristol alleys.

Yeagle of the Odd Fellows was high man with 539, while Sam Dixon was high for the Cast-Offs with 535.

CROYDON A. C. WILL PLAY BRISTOL ELEVEN

The annual gridiron tilt between Bristol A. A. and Croydon A. C. which is scheduled to take place tomorrow afternoon at Eddington field has turned into something more than tradition since the starting of negotiations between Croydon and St. Ann's of Bristol. The game now appears to be one for a title of championship of Lower Bucks County.

It all came about when it was whispered about that the victor of the Turkey Day tilt at Eddington would be the champ of this section. T. M. Juno, manager of the St. Ann's eleven stepped into the picture and said: "You can't settle the championship business without considering our team."

As a result a natural play-off has come about. Croydon will meet the Bristol A. A. in the first tilt of the series tomorrow. Then St. Ann's is scheduled for a charity game with the A. A. at Sullivan's Field on Saturday afternoon. Croydon and St. Ann's will meet at a near future date. So, winner takes all, title and all that goes with it in the way of glory.

At least, when the end of the season arrives, gridiron fans of Lower Bucks County will know who stands ace-high in pigskin toting. If Croydon is victor tomorrow and St. Ann's wins on Saturday, Bristol A. A. will be definitely out of the picture and the title will rest on a final fray. If, however, Bristol A. A. should take the honors tomorrow they will have to work hard to beat St. Ann's on Saturday. Should this be the result a game between Croydon and St. Ann's would be unnecessary as far as championship titles go.

The game at Eddington field tomorrow, which is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock will no doubt be a close match. Both lines claim a like weight and both teams pack a wallop backfield. It has been whispered about that Croydon is being honored with the long odds though all fans agree that a tough session of football will take place.

Since the game last Sunday when Croydon held the strong Rising Sun Bulldogs to a scoreless tie—the same team having beat St. Ann's 12 to 0 in the earlier part of the season—many fans have gone strong in their opinions as to the result of the fray. In Bristol, however, the home town rooters are backing their team strong and claim that it will be a walk-away in their favor. So there y'are. Take your choice.

Officials have prepared the Eddington field for a record crowd. The field has been newly-lined and new side-line ropes and posts have been erected in expectation. Parking spaces on the grounds have been marked out since orders came from the State to keep parked autos off the highways. Everything is in readiness and even old Jup Pluvius will have a hard time holding down the enthusiasm which this game has engendered.

SHAMROCKS TRIUMPH OVER GAELS, 48 TO 36

The Shamrocks took undisputed possession of first place in the A. O. H. Basketball League last night by defeating the Gaels, 48-36, while the Columbians were handing the Celtics a 36-30 reverse. The games were played on the A. O. H. court.

It was the second consecutive victory for the "Shamies" who are the only undefeated team in the Hibernians' loop. It was the first defeat for the Gaels and the first victory of the league for the Columbians. The Celtics have been beaten twice.

It was really Eddie Roe who tossed the Shamrocks to victory. He hit the cords for seven field goals and also scored seven times from the foul mark, making a total of 21 points. He also played a fine passing game to help his team-mates to roll the sphere into the net. "Tuddy" Gosline sunk in five shots to tally ten points.

Although they prove fine marksmen from the foul line, the Celtics could not overcome an early Columbian lead and bowed to "Vic" Potts' team. Fourteen of the losers' points were scored from the gift mark and kept the Celts in the game until the final whistle. "Chuckie" Connors was high scorer for the winners with ten points. The A. O. H. League games scheduled for Friday night have been cancelled.

METHOD OF SUBMITTING CLAIMS CAUSES TROUBLE

Many Hunters Fail to Properly Comply With Postal Regulations

INFORMATION IS GIVEN

Game Warden Daniel Potter, Jr., today makes public the following article relative to submitting of bounty claims properly:

Hunters submitting claims for bounty are causing the Game Commission and themselves considerable trouble by failing to properly comply with postal regulations.

In many cases claimants have been inserting their bounty affidavits in the same package with the skins they are probating, thereby making the package first-class mail instead of parcel post. As a result, these packages are opened by the Post Office authorities. The Game Commission is not compelled to accept parcels upon which postage is due, consequently they are asking that claimants insert the affidavit in a separate envelope having the necessary three cents postage to make the letter first-class, and then either fasten or paste same on the outside of the package. In this manner it can legally be mailed as parcel post.

Failure to comply with these regulations will result in the parcels being returned to the sender who will be obliged to pay the additional amount of postage due, and then remail to the Game Commission at Harrisburg, in accordance with postal regulations.

Pelts sent by parcel post must not be sealed or pasted in any way as this makes it possible to readily inspect the contents. This method of preparing packages for mailing also changes the classification from parcel post to first-class mail. Persons sending in bounty claims should not hesitate to consult their local post office authorities for information on latest regulations.

Five new benches have been purchased by the association, to be used at the meeting.

Miss Pyle asked the association to donate something toward costuming the children for the Christmas play, given in King Hall the afternoon before the Christmas vacation. The meeting moved to donate five dollars for this purpose. It was decided not to have any business meeting in December. Parents and friends of the children are invited to attend.

A plan to have a card party was discussed. Date will be announced later. Edward G. Katzmar, Mr. Wenner and Mr. Curtis were appointed on the committee.

Messrs. Swan and Katzmar are on the membership committee and reported that they are doing their best to secure members. It was suggested that each member of the meeting bring a friend in January to increase the attendance.

Miss Dorothy Wenner and Miss Ethel Hartman favored with a piano duet. Raymond Hill and Lewis Hartman gave a drum duet with Miss Hartman and Miss Wenner accompanying them on the piano. Mr. Peters' class presented the rest of the program: Recitation, Miss Peggy Skeen, "Good Thanksgiving"; Miss Jane Pedrick, recitation, "Thanksgiving"; "The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England," Miss Mildred Lange, original recitation by Marion Kirk; original fable, "Wise Turkey," Raymond Hill; original poem, "Thanksgiving," Miss Jane Pedrick; "Thanksgiving Day," Miss Margaret Lonnegan; original poem on "Thanksgiving Day," Margaret Pickersgill; original story by Manning Laster, "Ready George"; original poem, Leroy Swan, "The First Thanksgiving Day"; original Hallows'en story, Jack Scarber.

Feature of Scouts' Trip Is Passing of Tests

The members of Bristol Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, spent the week-end at Camp Buccou, Flemington, N. J., and returned to Bristol Sunday afternoon reporting a successful trip. The scouts were under the leadership of Scoutmaster P. W. Grunert and two members of the troop committee, H. A. Pettit and R. S. Beswick. The feature event of the trip was the practical demonstration of tracking and signaling, and first-aid. Two of the boys, H. Pettit, Jr., and Gene Nichols, laid out a trail three miles in length and from the end of the trail established communication with the camp by wig-wag messages from Gene Nichols to C. Nichols and back. Two other boys, Scheffey and Beswick, then followed the trail to pass their test in tracking, and accompanied by L. Herman, arrived at the end of the trail.

At the end of the trail Scheffey pretended he had a broken leg. Messages were sent to the camp to have the camp made ready, emergency first-aid was given, and Scheffey was carried to camp on a stretcher made with saplings and Scout coats.

Tests passed over the week-end: R. Scheffey, tracking and cooking; J. Beswick, tracking, W. Herman, knife and hatchet.

What Price Size?

By HARDIN BURNLEY

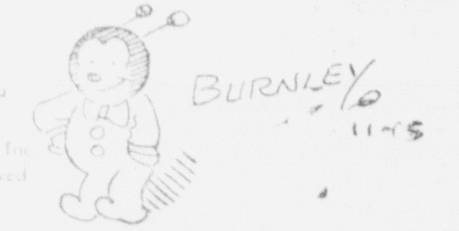

LITTLE MEN - ON THE GRIDIRON

LIGHT BACK-FIELD MEN LIKE ALBIE BOOTH AND ORVILLE MOHLER VERY OFTEN PROVE TOO FRAIL TO STAND THE GAFF, AND IMPAIRED HEALTH PREVENTS THEM FROM FINISHING THEIR GRID CAREERS AT COLLEGE.

TONY SIANO
FORMER FORDHAM CENTER - ONE OF THE FEW UNDERSIZED PLAYERS TO MAKE GOOD IN THE PRO RANKS

WHAT price size on the gridiron? It would certainly seem that little men have to face a tremendous handicap on the football field, and of course it is true that very few undersized players have made good in a big way on the gridiron.

As a matter of fact, two recent grid stars like Albie Booth and Orville Mohler, both of whom were very light as football players go, seem to prove that the smaller, lighter men are usually unable to stand the grueling pace of topnotch gridiron play.

Booth and Mohler were both football geniuses. They were endowed with more natural talent than almost any other football stars of recent times. Little Albie was absolutely uncanny in his ability to pick holes in the opposing line through which to make long runs. He was truly wrath-like in his broken-field running, and his magnetic personality was the driving force of the Yale eleven.

Mohler was tabbed as a gridiron genius even in his high school days. He was known as a ball-carrier who could "use a blade of grass for interference"—a marvelous quarterback and a great field general. Yet both Booth and Mohler with all their elusiveness and football genius, were constantly being injured, and both were unable to finish their college football careers because of impaired physique—resulting directly from gridiron injuries. They were too light to stand the terrific buffeting to which all football players are subjected

On the other hand, there is Tony Siano, former Fordham center and sometime All-American, who was subjected to all the terrific pounding which is entailed in playing the center position, and although he was merely a midget in comparison with the average line-men, he was a giant in football ability—and he stood the gaff. Not only did he emerge with flying colors and apparently unimpaired physique after several years of college play, but now he is actually making good as a professional football player! As you probably know, the professionals are usually much huskier than the average college gridmen, so you can imagine what little Tony is up against in the "pro" ranks!

Chesterfields are milder for the simple reason that they are made of milder, riper tobaccos, blended and cross-blended, and

One more thing. Chesterfields are pure . . . just as pure as the water you drink.

All along the line Chesterfield's mildness and better taste are clicking.
